Notes from the Field

Hello shareholders!

Earlier this morning we slipped quietly into fall as the sun tracked directly above the equator. Outside, the air has a particularly autumnal feel to it today and the leaves are turning and falling fast. Work in our fields and garden plots has continued apace, although the frustratingly wet and muddy conditions have also persisted as we have had even more rain in the past week (an inch on Monday alone!). We have had more light frost and the squash and beans are barely hanging on to life. We are hoping that the warmer, sunnier weather forecast for the next week will allow us to pick beans a few more times but the zucchini have likely produced their last fruits. This time of year is always bittersweet as we watch many of our plants reach the end of their productivity and life cycle and know that winter is not too far away. That being said, our gardens are still full of delicious produce and we are excited for the last few weeks of our CSA program.

Looking forward to seeing you all again this week. Happy eating!
